

Organization of Women in International Trade

OWIT Newsletter September 2019

□ OWIT International Upcoming Events

The Organization for Women in International Trade (OWIT) and the OWIT Tampa Bay Chapter are hosting OWIT's 19th World Conference this year in Tampa, Florida, on October 24, 2019 with the theme 'Year of the Woman'.

The Tampa Bay region is growing with entrepreneurship and business development at its core. Over the course of the conference, participants, comprised of OWIT global chapter members, partners, and attendees, will be given extraordinary access to trade experts, networking opportunities, and business insights. Indeed, OWIT's vision for its members and participants is ambitious: to empower women in both developed and emerging nations and throughout the world to powerfully shape international trade.

SCHEDULE OF EVENTS

Wednesday, October 23

Tampa Business Day

Join our tour to find out how Tampa went from "Cigar City" to an urban center for international trade! The Tampa business tour will bring participants to some of the most innovative and unique highlights in our downtown area. Meet Jennifer Diaz of Diaz Trade Law in North Miami! by VoyageMIA

VoyageMIA: Today we'd like to introduce you to Jennifer Diaz.

Jennifer, before we jump into specific questions about the business, why don't you give us some details about you and your story.

Jen Diaz: I was always a hard worker and believed strongly in internships. Throughout law school, I had twelve internships in numerous areas. I did not have a strong inclination for one area of practice and really wanted to experience different areas to figure out what I both wanted, and more importantly, did not want to do. My last internship was a clinical internship, meaning I actually paid my school to receive credit and worked for a firm full time (without pay). I was excited to gain real world experience and was in a business law clinical program. During my interview, I was told the position available was in international trade. I said that sounded great, without having an inkling of what it really meant. I asked if there were books I should read to prepare for the internship, and was told Kiss, Bow, Or Shake Hands would be helpful. It was a terrific book, but, did not prepare me for the crazy road ahead. That was 2006. Almost 14 years later and I'm still in the Customs and International Trade law field and am now a board-certified international attorney with my own legal practice. I now tell any intern or young lawyer craving to learn more about this area to read U.S. Customs: A Practitioner's Guide to Principles, Processes, and Procedures (International Practitioner's Deskbook Series).

VoyageMIA: Has it been a smooth road?

Jen Diaz: Let's start with the fact that I am a woman who is 5'1 and have a young-looking face (my mother has great skin). I've absolutely had challenges along the way. It took a substantial amount of time for the South Florida community to regard me as an expert in my field, and not regard me as someone who looks like their granddaughter. In order to combat this, I took a board certification exam and became a board-certified international attorney. I have now had to re-certify and have even served on the board certification committee approving those who wish to apply to become board-certified. I also became very active in the community and on non-profit boards. At one time I was serving on 10 boards at once and served as an adjunct professor of International Law at a local university. I currently serve as the President of the Organization of Women in International Trade (OWIT) which has 20 chapters worldwide and has been recognized as a leader in the community. One of my biggest challenges was proving to everyone who doubted me that I could both successfully work in the field as well as originate clients. I now have a successful law firm and will be proudly celebrating Diaz Trade Law's 4th anniversary in January 2020!"

OWIT Nigeria on a Trade Mission in Kenya with OWIT Nairobi!

"Know What You Want to Get What You Want" featuring Frida Owinga by Daisy Okoti

Having accumulated 25 years of experience in different sectors, Frida Owinga employs a simple five-step profit formula to help entrepreneurs transform their passions, vocations or expertise into profitable brands.

What is Passion Profit about?

Passion Profit is an organisation that helps individuals package their ideas well and turn them into profit making enterprises.

What tips would you offer young entrepreneurs looking to thrive in business?

First, they should have a very clear goal in mind. They should know what they want. Why are they starting the business? Are they looking to solve a problem in society or do they have some personal reasons driving them to start the business? Neither reason is better than the other, but to achieve success, one must apply different strategies for each.

Do you think young entrepreneurs are adequately prepared for business? Are there enough avenues for young entrepreneurs to thrive?

With the right knowledge and support, anyone can achieve whatever they desire. Success starts with one person's desire for a better future. And if they are consistent in their pursuit of the future they desire, they will take the necessary action to realise their dream. Anyone can get what they really want, if they want it badly enough.

Frida Owinga is the Board Advisor for OWIT Nairobi. She previously served in the OWIT Board as the Chairperson 2016-2017 and Vice Chair Programs, 2013-2015. She also sits on the International OWIT Board as Vice President, Chapter Development.

Creating a Gender-Sensitive Trade Environment through Trade Facilitation

How can trade facilitation reforms help to create a more conducive environment for women traders in Africa? Mucha Mlingo, President of OWIT Nairobi, explains.

At the Organization of Women in International Trade (OWIT) Nairobi, we work with women business-owners every day with ambitions to grow their businesses through trade. Yet gender biases remain a significant barrier to women's participation in international trade: women traders often face greater risks and more unfavourable conditions than their male counterparts, which can discourage them from engaging in cross-border commerce.

Some of these barriers are practical. Firstly, many of the women we work with find it difficult to acquire the information they need. If they are interested in exporting to Botswana, for example, they need to know what documents they will need, what duties may apply and how to comply with all the necessary border procedures. Secondly, the existing trade environment across the African continent is not women-friendly. Administrative processes are not streamlined and women traders report having to interact with multiple entities, which creates more opportunities for gender-based discrimination.

Mucha Mlingo, President of OWIT Nairobi, will speak at the Alliance community session on inclusive trade in Africa at the World Economic Forum on Africa on September 5th 2019. OWIT Nairobi is a non-profit, professional organisation that supports the advancement of women in international trade and business by providing networking and educational opportunities.

Mucha Mlingo Represented OWIT Nairobi at World Economic Forum For Africa

"I was honoured to represent OWIT Nairobi & participate in an event at World Economic Forum For Africa courtesy of the Global Alliance For Trade Facilitation. The session – “Innovate, Integrate & Empower for Inclusive Trade In Africa” explored the challenges that women traders in Africa face when accessing foreign markets and the participants worked to identify possible solutions that the Alliance can introduce across the projects that they have running across the continent."

These inspiring women spoke about their journeys in trade with humor, warmth, and candidness. We were honored to be able to celebrate this night alongside them.

OWIT Chicago joined with the American Association of University Women (AAUW) for Empower Chicago

On July 23, OWIT Chicago joined with the American Association of University Women (AAUW) for Empower Chicago, an event designed to close the gender leadership and pay gap and empower women to take immediate action. Andrea Saenz, the chief operating office for the Chicago Community Trust, shared with OWIT Chicago on how she managed to be successful when working in a male dominated environment. She dodged negativity in the moment, completed her projects and dealt with the naysayers after the fact. Devorah Heitner, PhD, author and founder of "Raising Digital Natives" reminded OWIT Chicago that "we all know things." She encouraged to share their knowledge and expertise with others who don't have the same skill set. Gloria Blackwell, Sr. VP of Fellowships & Programs for AAUW, entertained and educated everyone on how to be deliberate in setting goals and in being a leader. There was a separate workshop on salary negotiation. Everyone left with tangible skills on building their career and they had the opportunity to make meaningful connections with the other attendees. OWIT Chicago is able to continue the journey with the free WorkSmart online course. <https://salary.aawu.org>.

WEBINAR

Protecting Trademarks Across Borders

Presented by: Susan Dierenfeldt-Troy

Trademark rights are territorial. There is no such thing as an international trademark that is "good" everywhere. Protection of a trademark abroad requires registration of the mark with foreign countries wherever trademark protection is sought. The process can seem daunting especially where registration is sought in several jurisdictions. This webinar will discuss: 1) the avenues available for obtaining protection of a foreign mark in the United States; 2) the Madrid Protocol, a treaty with 80 member countries that allows a trademark owner to seek registration of a trademark in any one of its member countries by filing a single trademark application rather than multiple trademark applications; and 3) the nuances between U.S. trademark registration requirements and the registration requirements of other countries.

Susan Dierenfeldt-Troy, Esq., provides transactional and litigation legal services in the areas of intellectual property law, social media law, and business law through the Miami, Florida law firm of Troy & Schwartz, LLC, where legal meets entrepreneurship™. She is a registered patent attorney and a member of OWIT. As a result of her long pre-law career in new product development in the biotech and medical device industries, Susan understands the exhilaration and frustration associated with getting a new product to market or entering the service industries. She brings this invaluable background to her client relationships where she works with her clients to identify and address legal risks early on.

Considering an Agency Search: Now what? Initial Steps to Take for a Successful Search

Presented by: Lisa Colantuono -AAR Partners

For over eighteen years, Lisa Colantuono of AAR Partners has tackled the most challenging of agency searches including: Loews Hotels, Lee Jeans, Nikon, Panera Bread, Subaru, Juice Press and more. In her session, you'll learn about some of the challenges and pitfalls to avoid when considering an agency search. There are better ways to find an agency than leaving it up to "referrals made over lunch." What should you consider when thinking about an agency review? Who should be invited to be part of the search committee? What should be included in an RFI? When should you consider outside help - and what does a professional perspective bring to the process and the outcome? A great review process leads to optimal new agency relationships and positive brand results. Lisa will share criteria for a comprehensive, efficient and objective review process - and the best outcome.

Lisa has been immersed in advertising and marketing for over two decades. Since June 2001, she has worked directly with a myriad of marketers on agency reviews and has counseled numerous clients including Aruba Tourism Authority, Ben & Jerry's, Exxon Mobil, HGTV, Jergens, Jim Beam, Lee Jeans, Lindblad Expeditions, Panera Bread, Subaru (to name only a few) on finding the best communications partners for their needs. Caught in a unique position between clients who want a clean, smooth review process and agencies who want every possible advantage, Lisa is adept at remaining unruffled and gets the job done in a fair and positive manner for everyone involved. She not only believes in "enduring partnerships that matter," but also is enthusiastic about creating them.
